Our journey begins in the northern reaches of South America, a region characterized by its Caribbean coastlines, lush rainforests, and proximity to Central America.

Venezuela: Land of Oil and Mountains

Topping the northern coast, Venezuela is a country of striking contrasts. It's famously rich in petroleum reserves, which have historically shaped its economy. Geographically, it boasts a long Caribbean coastline, the dramatic peaks of the Andes in its west, and a portion of the Amazon rainforest in the south. The Angel Falls, the world's highest uninterrupted waterfall, is a must-see natural wonder. While facing economic challenges, Venezuela's spirit and natural beauty remain undeniable.
